

CRAWFORD'S CLAIMS REJECTED AS SPECIOUS BY NOTED ORANGE LEADER

CRAWFORD STATES RISK CASE FOR AMERICANS

FIRST INSTALLMENT.
By LINDSAY CRAWFORD,
President of the Independent Order of Orange Lodges; former member of the National Grand Council of the Church of Ireland; President of the Friends of Ireland, and Editor of the Bostonian, Toronto, Canada.

Before I go into certain detailed statements with regard to industrial and economic conditions in Ireland, it is necessary for Americans to get down to the fundamental issues which these Ulster delegates, now in America, are raising, and which are as essential to an intelligent understanding of the Irish question. Waiting for the moment the side issues of separatism and racial character, which are the chief stock in trade of the Carletonites, the real issues for the American people are deeper than the petty differences due to religious division.

There are two issues which must be applied to anyone in America who claims to be an Irishman.

opposes self-determination in Ireland. In the first place, what are the grounds upon which the opponents of the Irish republic reject their appeal for the support of the American people? Secondly, what are the grounds upon which Crawford the Valerianista rejects the case of the Ulster delegates? Secondly, what are the grounds upon which Crawford the Valerianista rejects the case of the Ulster delegates?

The question of a separate national status for Ireland is a question of national self-determination. It is a question of the right of a people to determine their own fate. It is a question of the right of a people to determine their own future. It is a question of the right of a people to determine their own destiny.

Vose Player Piano

A Fine Christmas Gift

A fine instrument that shows the very highest degree of player improvement. Its beautiful Vose tone lifts it into the realm of perfect musical instruments.

THE Vose experience of nearly three-quarters of a century has developed many improvements in piano construction and tone development.

This Player is the sum of all that experience and improvement, and stands as the ultimate in player value.

A comparison—the played roll tells a stronger and more convincing story of its superiority than the written notation on a right piano and player in any terms.

HEROIC WORK SAVES MANY LIVES AS FLAMES SWEEP HOTEL

ward E. Cole, widow of the former treasurer of the Standard Oil Company, who was married to one hundred and fifty tenants of the exclusive Back Bay apartment hotel, including many prominent persons and one who had been in the street in the bitter cold, had only a couple of minutes to get their night clothes.

Rear Admiral William A. Marshall, retired, and his daughter, Elizabeth, were carried down the fire escape by firemen, while Mr. W. Abbott carried his wife from the third floor. The fire started on the fourth floor of the hotel, over apartment No. 24, and, according to officials of the fire department, gained great headway before an alarm was sounded.

Spreading swiftly through the structure, it consumed the tenants and a few moments in which to seize a few valuables and pieces of clothing before they were forced to flee for their lives.

The extreme cold handicapped firemen in fighting the blaze and in rescuing occupants of the building, who were cared for in adjoining buildings as soon as they reached the street. The damage was estimated at $20,000.

Mr. E. J. Jenkinson, former Harvard business manager, who is manager of the hotel, said that Mrs. Cole, whose husband died about a year ago, had lived there for twenty years. He said that an attempt was made to awaken her, but that she failed to respond to knocks on her door. Jenkinson, who is a former house at Harvard Island, near Kittery, Me., married into the McClure family of New York, a member of which, Miss Bell H. McClure, was in the house.

JURY WAS FATAL.
Mr. Whitney, who lived on the fifth floor, was believed to have been rendered unconscious from the smoke. Later, coming to, he staggered down to the third floor, and, stepping to a window, looked to the courtyard below. Firemen placed him up and he was rushed to the City Hospital, but died on the way.

Manager Jenkinson said that a short time ago the wiring in the building was condemned and recommendations made that another sort of wiring be installed. He said he did not agree with the recommendation, for he believed that the old wiring was better and was suited for further use.

The new type wiring was installed and shortly thereafter there was a slight fire, caused by defective wiring. He insisted that the fire today, which started on the fourth floor in the ceiling over apartment thirty-four, was caused in the same manner.

Miss Elizabeth Zerrahn, a Vincent Club girl, who occupies apartment No. 12, with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Franz Zerrahn, is worthy of the highest praise for assistance to occupants of the burning building. The girl and her parents, dressed in night clothes, were seen running to the lower corridor while the blaze raged in the upper part of the building. She was not excited. The family consisted of a number of elderly people, according to them, who were rescued and administered valuable aid.

While inquiring over the loss of a valuable bracelet, dropped by Miss Zerrahn, another girl, Miss Zerrahn learned from Ladderman Jones, that the latter had found the costly article.

COOL-HEADED GIRL.
A fire chief noting Miss Zerrahn at work comforting the excited tenants remarked: "Good, cool-headed girl there; just the kind needed in a blaze like this."

Standing in the bitter cold with her parents, she refused to comment on her acts other than to say: "It wonderful the way everyone acted in such danger."

Mrs. Theodore Armstrong, whose husband is overseas in the American Ambulance Service, returned to the Abbotsford today with her two sons, Theodore and Paul, aged five and eight years respectively. They had been away for some time and returned home in anticipation of the return to this country of the elder Armstrong. A year ago they were returning to Boston from Alaska aboard the Princess Sophia which was sunk. They were all rescued from death at that time.

FINDS MRS. COLE'S BODY.

Mrs. Edward E. Cole was found suffocated in her apartment by Lieutenant Thomas P. Plankton. The flames had eaten into her suite and when the firemen arrived the room was a mass of flames. Her lower limbs were badly burned.

Miss Rose Flood, governess for the children of George S. Talbot, who occupies suite 22, smaller rooms and around her employer and his daughter, Theodore, ten, who occupies an adjoining suite. Miss Flood escaped a blanket around the child, Miss Zerrahn learned from Ladderman Jones, that the latter had found the costly article.

$5000 DAMAGE BY FIRE

IN BLOCK IN CHELSEA

Damage estimated at $5000 was done today to the Witman block on Broadway, Chelsea, when a fire caused by a defective radiator broke out in the dance hall above one of the main shops. The damage in the stores was caused mostly by water from the extinguishers used on the second floor. Among the goods damaged were No. 387, Louis Prunet, tobacco; No. 185, Weston pawn shop; No. 383-391, Benjamin Plongoff and H. K. Kohn, tailors; and the Foster Brothers shoe repairing room. The building is owned by Isadore Witman.

POLICEMAN RESCUES

INVALID OF SIXTY-FIVE

Fifty dollars damage was done, and Mrs. Nellie Flynn, sixty-five years old, rescued by Sergeant Joseph M. Lynch when, as the result of thawing water pipes at No. 5 Hawkins street, Somerville, fire caused a crowd of men to enter the home, which was on the second floor with Mrs. Flynn who is an invalid, notified Sergeant Lynch that Mrs. Flynn was upstairs. Rescue was effected by way of a fire escape.

FLAMES DRIVE OUT

RESTAURANT PATRONS

Overheated furnace pipes on the second floor of the two-story wooden building at No. 25 Cross street, North End, today caused a fire which forced the patrons of the restaurant to flee. The fire started on the first floor in the street. The flames had spread to the second floor and caused damage estimated at $1,000. The building is owned by David Chasany.

"The Miracle of Love" in motion pictures, a Cosmopolitan production, screened under the direction of Robert Z. Leonard, is being shown at leading theatres of the country. Scenario by Adrian Johnson and Leon d'Urselle. Presented by Famous Players-Lasky Corporation as Paramount-Artcraft picture.

He stood alone. "I was free," he said, "and I was no longer responsible to any favor or to the convenience of another. I was free to make my own choice in any part of it, even though it should be to adopt. With that, I am convinced, I can live. I am free to be satisfied, for I want by her side, in whom I look for the years, now passing and the purpose, too. A real riddle was solved."

Month of September

Cigarette production in September of this year established a high record, totaling 4,232,655,000. The increase was $70,600,000 compared with the corresponding 1914 month. The in-

The consumption of cigarettes in this country is increasing at a tremendous rate. During the first year in which the tobacco trust operated, production was approximately 3,800,000 cigarettes, or about 1,300,000,000 less than the total for a single month in 1913.

Quicksilver Production

The quicksilver output of the United States for the third 1919 quarter is reported by the Geological Sur-

The First Duty of Americans Is to Their Own Land and People

College Point, Dec. 10.

Editor New York American:

I read your editorial in this morning's American and was greatly surprised at the way you worded it. I am not a college graduate or even a public school graduate or I would be able to make myself understood more clearly. I am a member of the College Point War Veterans, was in the army two years, eleven months in France, and wounded twice.

"Now, to get personal, I wonder what part you played in the world war, to say that 'no American soldier worthy of wearing the uniform of the United States Army would do such a thing' as to protest a bunch of pro-Germans, one of whom refused to buy a Liberty Bond during the war, from running a fair to help the starving babies of Germany and Austria-Hungary."

"We fought the same babies' fathers, and did they show any mercy for the babies of France and Belgium? There are enough starving babies in America to help. I am an American once and for all time, and such things get under the skin."

"Mr. Hoover had a nice job, three months a day and a nice bed to sleep in at night. We slept in trenches in Belgium and France both, when we could, often went without anything to eat, as any real doughboy can tell you; and when we were turned out for a new start in life, I am not fit to do any hard work and consequently am working in an office for very low wages."

"Is there any one willing to help out a fellow who served the country as a volunteer while a lot of others stayed at home and dodged the draft, would rather help the babies of the countries we fought?"

"You say no true American would have done as we did. You were right. We volunteered or did not claim exemption when the time came, while some of your true Americans were hiding behind pettifoggery. I hope that I may be able to influence some of my friends to help sell some of the fair in the future that will be held to aid Germany. No doubt the little ones will give us a lot to do what their fathers have failed to do."

"There is no doubt in my mind that this letter will find its way into the waste basket, for any one who wrote that editorial would probably be ashamed to say what he did in the war for democracy."

"I remain,
A True American Who Served His Country as a Doughboy and a Member of the College Point War Veterans."

December 13.

Editor New York American:

Relative to your recent editorial on the fair at College Point to raise money to feed hungry children in Austria-Hungary and Germany, these were the facts:

"The veterans of the American Legion of College Point held a meeting to consider whether there were any reasons for action on their part, after discussion, decided to send a committee to the organizers of the fair to offer cooperation, with the suggestion that one night's receipts of the fair be given for the relief of hungry children in New York."

"This committee had an entirely cordial meeting with the promoters of the fair, and it was decided not to press the suggestion, but to invite cooperation for a separate fair, to be arranged after the conclusion of peace, for the benefit of the New York children."

"No representative of the Legion visited the police with reference to the matter nor was there any occasion for such a visit. If any persons saw the police it was without the prompting or authority of the Legion. It was, in fact, the purpose and effect of the Legion's action to remove all misunderstanding or friction, and this purpose was accomplished. Very truly yours,
C. E. EPPENBACH,
Acting Official, American Legion,
College Point."

Editor New York American:

These two letters, which you send up to me, should be printed and should be made the subject of an editorial making the position of the American Legion quite clear.

It seems to me an entirely proper and perfectly patriotic position as far as the organization is concerned.

No institution can be held responsible for the individual acts of a few extremists.

I read C. E. Eppenbach's letter with satisfaction and I sympathize thoroughly with any one who has to bear the burden for individual acts and utterances with which he does not always quite agree.

Indeed, I read the Doughboy's letter with considerable tolerance. His feelings, to be sure, temporarily overcame his better judgment, but perhaps if we had been through what he has, we would not be so calmly judicious ourselves. Print his letter. He has a right to be heard.

C. E. Eppenbach's letter should be accepted as complete and final.

It is obviously a perfectly fair and absolutely exact statement of the facts.

From these two letters it is clear that whatever demonstrations were made at College Point were wholly individual and not in any way representative of the American Legion as an organization. Certainly the proposal to hold a fair for American poor children is a most commendable idea, and this plan and example of the American Legion should have the hearty approval and support of all good Americans.

It is well to be considerate of our friends and allies. It is desirable to be charitable to our enemies. But it is best of all to be patriotically thoughtful of the welfare of our own people.

There has been in this country altogether too much hysterical sentiment over foreign peoples who are not at all sentimental about us. We should be sympathetic, of course, with the helpless and innocent involved in the great distress and disaster which those foreign nations have brought upon themselves.

That is our Christian duty and we have performed it and are performing it nobly.

But we must not forget the best interests of our own people. We must not neglect our own requirements. We must not sacrifice our own America on the altar of altruistic devotion to foreign objects and ideas.

We may be glad the American Legion did not make an organized demonstration against the charitable effort to relieve the sufferings of helpless infants in stricken foreign lands.

That would have been ungenerous, un-American, unworthy of gentlemen and soldiers.

But we should be still more glad that the American Legion did think of American children and did propose and promote a proper plan to help the needy here at home.

We should hope that the American Legion will continue along these patriotic lines and will help to teach all Americans that, no matter what sympathies they have for foreign countries and foreign conditions, they must reserve their deepest devotion for their own country, their own people and their own American aims and ideals.

Americans should realize that the greatest service they can render to the world is to make conditions in our own land as nearly perfect as possible, to make our country as great and as dominant in world influence as possible, to make our people as prosperous and contented as possible and to show the other nations of the earth that our greatness and happiness are attained by peaceful pursuance of our own affairs, by independence of the schemes and conflicts and the consequent disasters of other nations, by sincere devotion to genuine democracy as free from anarchy as from autocracy.

Let us lead the world by our ideals and prove their truth and potency by our own greatness and the high example we set mankind.

I personally do not think that the American Legion as an organization is to be criticized at all. It is to be greatly praised. May it live as long as it is truly American, and may it continue to work with all other loyal Americans to make our America first and BEST in all the world.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

Landlords Owe It to Public to Protect the Homeless

January first will see the renewal of hundreds of leases of apartments in the Greater Boston District. Many of these leases will be extortionate and exacted from the tenant because the tenant knows nowhere else to go.

But quite aside from all other questions there is good ground for belief that a majority of the great Boston apartment house landlords are poor business men. Confident that high prices will last indefinitely, they grasp today all they can get, with no thought of the morrow when, with normal conditions resumed and extensive building operations undertaken by sane men who are considering the future, they will find themselves deserted by those who are driven to pay whatever tribute was demanded to secure shelter from the elements.

If a landlord is wise he will not refuse to renew on the first of the year a lease with a desirable tenant upon reasonable terms, and those agents who do renew leases owe it to the public to make sure that these leases are given to homelessers and not to speculators who will exploit homelessers. It is an extraordinary fact of which the public is probably little aware, that one of the causes of high rents in Boston leased apartments is due to the remarkable speculation of middle-aged women who buy up leases and then release at great profit. Their sex does not make it any the less intolerable as profiteers in rent.

So much for those landlords who want to be reasonable and let well enough alone. As to the other class of landlords, we hope this Legislature will not adjourn without perfecting the law by which they can be reached and punished.

Mrs. Glyn Gives Advice to the Engaged

THE engagement period, says

Ellen Glyn, is one of the most critical of times in the lives of lovers: their future may be made or marred by what happens during the months of betrothal. Scores of engagements broken off every day are evidence that all the rocks are not safely passed when Henry places the diamond upon the third finger of Celia's left hand.

Mrs. Glyn, continuing her series of articles on the "Secrets of Love" in the Boston Sunday Advertiser, pays attention this week to the problems which beset the newly engaged young woman. Last week she told Celia how to captivate Henry and bring him to the point of a proposal. This week she shows Celia how to keep Henry now that she has him.

Science is almost ready to announce the "superbun." Poultry experts have succeeded in establishing her as a definite breed after the expenditure of much time and patience. As a result we shall have chickens as large as turkeys, and eggs nearly twice as heavy as those to which we are accustomed.

Peasants, now a desert, is to be made once again the "Land flowing with milk and honey" of the Scriptures. A vast scheme of irrigation and reforestation, under the control of a British government commission, has been completed and approved by the enlightened Jewish and Arab leaders of the Holy Land population.

Geraldine Farrar recently accomplished a remarkable feat. First, she put on fifty pounds in weight. Then, when she needed the extra flesh no longer, she discarded it. Women will be interested in her method.

She moved the fifty pounds, it appears, to assist her in wearing the suit of silver armor which she wore as the heroine of "Joan the Woman." After the picture was made she had to go back to the gaudy of Camille and the slix of Madame Butterfly. She did it, and the end process of gain and loss was carried out successfully in less than a year's time.

New misfortune are being added almost daily to the many which have befallen the beautiful Mrs. Beatrice Pratt Benjamin as the result of her marriage to the fascinating Preston Gibson. As things stand at present, she may lose $20,000 in cash, is being sued for $20,000, is threatened with having her two children taken from her and is estranged from her own mother after marrying a man already twice divorced.

Will she find Mr. Gibson worth what she is paying for him? Read the story of her domestic life in the next Boston Sunday Advertiser.

As this woman feels, it is unnecessarily humiliating to have to be continually begging for small sums to cover her own needs. It is a cruel and a cruel thing to have a quarrel about it every time she does so.

Allowance Is Ridiculous

The husband is earning the family living, he is doing all the work necessary to keep up the home. He would have a fine time trying to feed and lodge himself and the child and the laundry and other bills on $15 a week, and yet he maintains all three of them on that inadequate allowance. It is a miserable and unfair proportion of his wages to spend on the home, and the fact that he quarrels about giving her money for her own expenses is another indictment of his character.

It is not worth while for a woman to go on giving the best she can under such circumstances, while he is giving her nothing in return, at her expense, of seeing money pile up in the bank.

The only thing a woman is to do is to take the attitude of no pay no work. She should make a demand that she has been thinking the matter over for twenty years and has come to a final, unshakable decision that unless he makes a satisfactory arrangement with her she will go to work herself.

PUT HOME FIRST OF ALL.

Copyright, 1919, by International Feature Service, Inc. Old man, you cannot impress your wife with the fact that you are a fearless man and not afraid to meet other men at any sort of a life game by being dictatorial and a browbeater in your own home.

Usually the man who is arrogant with his wife is a weakling when he comes in contact with other men.

It seems to be the desire of men of this sort to take it out on those who are practically in a defenseless position.

Because a man is stern and gruff at office or shop is no indication that he is a bear at home.

And the man most affable with his fellows outside his home may be the worst sort of a crank within his own four walls.

Some wives who appear to be everything they should be while in the society of friends are regular termites at home.

Home should come first, extra time only in outside work.
